

Office of International Studies in Education

Michigan State University joins with schools and universities around the country to celebrate International Education Week, November 18th to 22nd, which recognizes the importance of global perspectives in education and exchange. The College of Education is hosting two talks and discussions this year: one on global learning and a second highlighting research work of two faculty members. These events are also part of the continuing 40th year anniversary celebration of the Office of International Studies in Education. We invite you to join in person if possible. A zoom link for each is also available.

Global Learning in the College of Education: Looking to the Future

Monday, Nov 18, 1:30 to 3:00pm, 133F Erickson

This event will showcase the work of our most recent global curriculum fellows and will engage all attendees in a discussion on questions around global learning such as, What does it mean for the College of Education to think about global learning in the changing higher education landscape? How might we facilitate such future oriented efforts by tapping into our networks, knowledge and resources?

Faculty Research Presentations and Discussions

Tuesday, Nov 19, 2:00 to 3:00pm, 252 Erickson

Becoming permanent: the interplay between teacher job protection and school competition- evidence from Chile

Dr. Josep Maria Nadal Fernandez, EPIC Postdoctoral Fellow

Educating African immigrant youth: Schooling and civic engagement in K-12 schools

Dr. Vaughn Watson, Associate Professor, Department of Teacher Education

Zoom link for both sessions:

<https://msu.zoom.us/j/92684102955>

Meeting ID: 926 8410 2955, Passcode: OISE